About the Workshop

Evidence of the link between cruelty to animals and human violence is everywhere. Studies in psychology, sociology, and criminology clearly show that violent offenders frequently have childhood and adolescent histories of serious and repeated animal abuse. Recent research also shows that this cruelty often occurs in connection with family violence - child abuse, spouse abuse, and elder abuse. The purpose of this one-day conference is to focus on the "link" between the violence issues and build bridges between interest groups involved in combating and preventing violence of all kinds.

Keynote Speaker

Phil Arkow is an internationally acclaimed lecturer, author, and humane educator. Mr. Arkow is the consultant for Link® Programs at the American Humane Association, the nation's oldest federation of child and animal protection organizations. He also chairs the Latham Foundation's Animal Abuse and Family Violence Prevention Project. He conducts trainings around the world for animal shelters, child protection agencies, domestic violence programs, adult protective services, law enforcement, judges, and veterinarians. He is an adjunct faculty member at Harcum College and Camden County College where he teaches certificate courses in animal-assisted therapy & activities. He has authored or edited numerous articles and nine key reference books on the human-animal bond, humane education, animal-assisted therapy, violence prevention, and animal shelter management. PEACE BEGINS AT HOME

You have seen the emails, you have seen the press!

The Battered Women's Shelter and The Medina County Domestic & Sexual Assault Coalition in partnership with Pawsibilities (The Humane Society of Greater Akron) and with support from The Stephenson Foundation want to draw attention to the very serious issue of pets who live in homes where family violence occurs.

Cruelty to animals is both an indicator and predictor of interpersonal, family, and community violence. In addition, an alarming number of women report that threats to their furry companions prevent them from leaving abusive relationships.

Tina is a mother of 3 and she suffered at the hands of an abusive partner for 14 years before she was able to break free. She knows all too well that animal abuse and domestic violence go hand in hand. Many times her dog was threatened and this abuse was one of the things that kept her there. Her husband would hit their dog with his fist and also once with a shovel. One day her husband said the dog had "gone away". Tina finally broke free from this abuse, received services from BWS and is now one of our remarkable speakers!

The presenter

Internationally acclaimed lecturer, author and educator, Phil Arkow, is coordinator of the National Link Coalition and a consultant for the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Animals & Society Institute. He recently directed Link Programs at the American Humane Association, the nation's oldest federation of child and animal protection organizations. He also chairs the Latham Foundation's Animal Abuse and Family Violence Prevention Project.

He was one of the founders of the National Link Coalition, the National Animal Control Association, the Animal Welfare Federation of New Jersey, and the Colorado Federation of Animal Welfare Agencies. He trains internationally on a variety of topics for animal shelters, child protection agencies, domestic violence programs, adult protective services, law enforcement, judges and veterinarians. He is an adjunct faculty member at Harcum College and Camden County College where he teaches Certificate courses in Animal-Assisted Therapy.

A former newspaper reporter and foundation communications officer, Arkow is a prolific writer. He has authored and edited innumerable articles, chapters and nine key reference books on the human-animal bond, violence prevention, humane education, animal-assisted therapy, and animal shelter management. He has also served the American Veterinary Medical Association, the Delta Society, and the American Association of Human-Animal Bond Veterinarians.

"One of the most dangerous things that can happen to a child is to kill or torture an animal and get away with it."
Margaret Mead, Anthropologist

Statistics show that individuals who abuse animals may be five times more likely to commit violent crimes against people and four times more likely to commit property crimes than are individuals without a history of animal abuse. The FBI clearly sees animal cruelty as a predictor of violence against humans and considers past animal abuse when they profile serial killers. Many animals are also often tortured or killed by abusive spouses to inflict emotional abuse on women or children who love the family pet, in yet another form of manipulation and abuse. Join us for a fascinating public policy program that will explore the link between animal abuse and human violence and consider its impact on social services, therapeutic interventions, and the criminal justice system.

Join us as we examine these questions and more:

- Why do people engage in torture and killing of animals?
- What is the link between serial murderers and a past history of animal abuse?
- How should therapists, counselors and caseworkers handle animal abuse cases?
- What forms of treatment are available for juveniles and adults to help prevent increasingly abusive and violent behavior?
- What are the psychological issues underlying abusive behavior and can this pattern be changed?
- What is the role of women's shelters in dealing with these issues?
- How are animal abuse, child abuse and family violence intertwined?
- Is there a link to elder abuse as well?
- What constitutes abuse and what signs should be a warning?

GRAND RAPIDS, MI — Animal cruelty and its connection to domestic violence and child abuse will be the topic of a forum Saturday at Thomas M. Cooley Law School.

Organized by Cooley Law School's Animal Law Society, the symposium will feature Phil Arkow, a consultant for the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Animals and Society Institute. Arkow has written books on animal cruelty and animal-assisted therapy.

These puppies were up for adoption from The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty of Animals of Southwest Michigan after they were rescued from an animal cruelty case. Cooley Law School is hosting a symposium Saturday on the connections between animal cruelty, child abuse and domestic violence.

Recently, Kent County Circuit Court Judge Paul Sullivan cited a connection between violence against animals and violence against people when sentencing a woman accused of killing three kittens. Melanie Sabrina-Roberta Jasina snapped the necks of the three kittens March 3 after some type of domestic argument with a 16-year-old at a Center Avenue NE home near Ann Street.

"People who do this to animals, even wild animals, are often considered to be at risk for violent activities against people," Sullivan said before sentencing Jasina to 150 days in jail and two years of probation.

NATIONAL LINK COALITION
Working together to stop violence against people and animals

The seminars on Rapid Response, AniCare Adult/Child and “The Link” review the dynamics of animal abuse and how it may be relevant to your clients and their families. In most child abuse cases, domestic violence, school bullying or elder abuse, one seldom has to look far to find a component that involves animals being abused as well.

Because cruelty to animals can potentially begin a cycle of violence that affects both animals and people, it is important for everyone to be aware of this piece of the picture. Including basic questions in home visits or interviews about companion animals and how they are treated by family members could provide valuable insight about the welfare of children as well as the animals.

Along with a general understanding of “The Link” between animal abuse and domestic violence, this training will provide overviews of Kansas and Missouri animal cruelty laws, why it is important to report animal abuse as soon as possible, and what resources are available. The training includes an experiential learning workshop about AniCare Adult, and AniCare Child, as specialized approaches to assessment and treatment for juveniles and adults who abuse animals.

This information will give professionals in the fields of animal control, law enforcement, criminal justice, social work, and animal welfare the tools they need to know how to identify animal cruelty and concerns related to abusive behavior, what questions to ask, who to call to report any concern about animal abuse, and where to find resources for appropriate counseling or probation recommendations.
